o-pened the door and you walked in,— the scent of wild jas-mine.— The room— seemed to freeze in time,— my reg-u-lar ta-ble will be just fine.—

Ra-di-ant and el-e-gant, you might be,— but— your con-cen-tra-tion is so go-light-ly.—

Both of your eyes— re-flect-ing the moon, you real-ly think you own the room.—

So what game shall we play to-day? — How a-bout the one where you don't — get your way, — but e - ven if you do, that's o - - kay.

Verse 2 lyrics:

Try to pick it up, reading the signs,
It's turning out to be a real good time,
And who'd have thought that entertainment,
Lies in the winter of your discontent.

Now, sit at the table, face to face,
Queen takes pawn, check or checkmate!
I feel your foot brush against my leg,
I'm not that easily led.

You flutter your eyes and you toss your hair,
I have to say that it is kind of unfair,
Let me tell you baby now what's in store,
You win the battle, but I'll win the war!
